

Communications and stakeholder engagement

Helping projects develop and maintain a social licence to operate.

CNC Project Management's Communication and Stakeholder Engagement team is comprised of communications, engagement and government relations professionals with deep experience across energy and infrastructure projects across Australia. Many members of our team are IAP2 accredited or undertaking accreditation. We provide advice to clients that ensures an optimum outcome for both their project and communities impacted by a project.

We proactively identify and manage community and stakeholder risks that can threaten a project throughout planning, construction and operations.

Our extensive experience in all Australian jurisdictions and our relationships with government and regulators allows us to deliver an expert, best practice approach in addressing mandatory and best-practice consultation requirements at a local, state and federal level.

Our expertise

Strategy and Planning

At the outset of projects, we develop communications and engagement strategies and plans. These plans are best-practice and meet regulatory and industry standards.

Strategic communications

After we develop the strategy, we prepare messaging and create content across a variety of channels.

We also provide advocacy, government relations, media relations, issues management and pre-contract services.

Engagement

Our team undertakes stakeholder mapping and analysis before engaging directly with the stakeholders and the community.

Community Relations

We plan and lead events, focus groups, public presentations, workshops as well as implementing community benefit strategies.

Compliance

We ensure that activities are compliant and documented to meet legislative and regulator requirements.
